The Bullfinch (Pyrrhula europaea). This handsome finch is a resident of the British Isles, and is a favourite cage-bird. Its natural song is by no means loud nor beautiful, but it can be taught to pipe an air sweetly and correctly, a well-trained Piping Bullfinch being a valuable bird. The male has a black crown and a brick-coloured breast, while the female's breast is brown. They build a flat nest of small twigs with a cup of rootlets and feathers and sometimes wool. The eggs, from four to six in number, are greenish blue, blotched a streaked brown.
